SERGEANT WOOD IS ORDERED TO MADISON FOR AN EXAMINATION

Regular Army Instructor of Company M, on List for Promotion to First Lieutenant, U. S. A.

Sergeant Ernest Wood, U. S. A., who has been stationed in Janesville since last fall as sergeant instructor of the local company, and more recently was transferred to Edgerton to take command of that platoon, has been ordered to report to Major Richardson, at Madison, to take an examination for promotion to a first lieutenant in the new army that Uncle Sam is organizing. Sergeant Wood has been an instructor of the Wisconsin national guard for the past three years, previous to that having seen service in the third regular in the Philippines and since coming here, having been transferred to the 20th Infantry, U. S. A. He has made a host of friends in Janesville and Edgerton since his being detailed here, who will be sorry to know of the possibility that he will be transferred. It is possible this may yet be effected as Sergeant Wood has expressed a desire to remain with Company M, and if possible will ask to remain here. The promotion examination was called up for examination at Madison, and recommended by Col. Frederick of the central division of the army stationed at Chicago, shows that the sergeant has put his eye upon his efficiency for some time past.

U. S. IN WAR TOPIC FOR COMMENCEMENT

Interesting Meeting is Held Friday Afternoon at the home of Mrs. Claire Capelle.

An interesting series of papers was given at the meeting of the Philomathean club held on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Claire Capelle on Everett avenue. They were papers which for some reason had been postponed during the winter meetings and they were grouped together into an extra program. Mrs. F. A. Taylor gave a most interesting paper on "What the United States Has Done for the Philippines." She spoke of the great improvement of the islands with their seven million population during the sixteen years since they were taken over by the United States. The military government has divided the work into bureau of finance, justice, education, agriculture and many other departments. The bureau of education especially has done wonderful work, agriculture being taught to the boys and domestic science to the girls. Good roads have been put in everywhere. The city of Manila has been made the finest city of the Orient and what a summer resort. A thoughtful paper given by Mrs. F. H. Parnsworth on "Needed Reforms in the Schools," touched on some of the problems presented to the average parents on school matters. She suggested plenty of fresh air on warm days, the elimination of chalk dust and other matters of like nature. She suggested co-operation with teachers and said that their position was more than a job, it was a profession. She hoped to see parent-teachers' associations started to help both parent and child.

An especially interesting paper on the topic: "Old Landmarks," was given by Mrs. F. A. Taylor, with many illustrations of postcard pictures of those old landmarks of California as the particular landmarks described, and mentioned the old statues, pictures, carving and leather work which they still contain. There were for many twenty-one of these places scattered along the one thousand miles of the "King's Highway." The old fort at Sacramento, Ramona's marriage place, the San Diego and the buildings of Monterey were also described.

Sewing was done by the members present for the Red Cross work and delicious refreshments were served by the hostess at the close of the afternoon.

FORMER JANESVILLE MAN SELLS ROCKFORD BUSINESS

Arthur W. Wheelock, formerly of Janesville, but for the past twenty-nine years a resident of Rockford, Ill., where he has been proprietor of a crockery store, has announced his intention to sell out his business and to embark on an entirely new enterprise. The Wheelocks for many years owned a crockery business in Janesville, located in the store now occupied by S. P. Turner, on South Main street. Mr. Wheelock also owned a store in Milwaukee, which he closed out two years ago, and one in Des Moines, which he has just disposed of. He will continue to operate the Wheelock stores now located at Peoria and South Bend.

A Rockford paper has the following to say: "Art. Wheelock is not yielding to any sudden impulse in deciding upon a change in business. His ambitions are for bigger business achievements, toward which he has been seriously working for several years and his plans are now so far matured that he will immediately close out his stock, lease his store and embark in an altogether different business, the larger possibilities of which appeal to him most strongly."

SURPRISED ON OCCASION OF 25TH WEDDING DAY

A large number of relatives and friends last evening planned and successfully carried out a big surprise party on Mr. and Mrs. Edward Birkeland at their home on West Pleasant street, the occasion being the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Birkeland. The self-invited guests arrived early with well-stocked hampers and a very enjoyable evening was experienced. Mr. and Mrs. Birkeland were presented with a purse of money in honor of the occasion and were extended many happy returns of the day, as well as good wishes for their future. Altogether fifty-three were in attendance.

GO TO STATE CAMP BY MIDDLE OF JUNE

Company M Will Be Included In This Order—General Holway Returns From Washington.

Unless present plans are changed, Company M, U. S. A., which includes the Edgerton platoon, will be ordered to Camp Douglas for intensive training for a month about June 1st. Captain E. N. Caldwell had no orders in this respect, but a dispatch from Madison, published below, gives substantiation to the report:
"On July 15, the Wisconsin National Guard and men enlisted in the National guard reserve will be mustered into the federal service. Adjutant General Orlando Holway announced Friday night upon his return to Madison from Washington, D. C., where he conferred with Secretary of War Baker.
"On or about June 15, General Holway said, the men will be mobilized at Camp Douglas for a period of intensive training. Barracks in the Badger state forces will be sent 'somewhere in Texas,' and authorities here believe they will be among the first to be sent to the firing line in France.
"Two thirds of the eleven divisions of the army of the United States will be composed of the guard from this state, with Michigan filling out the division. This means, General Holway said, that the fighting force from Wisconsin will remain in one division.
"In addition to six regiments of infantry in the division, the state will raise six training battalions of 1,000 each, those men to remain at Camp Douglas until they are called upon to fill gaps in the unit to which Badger guardsmen have been assigned. Including the training battalions, Wisconsin will raise a fighting force of about 22,400 men.
"General Holway and Governor Philipp remained in conference until a late hour Friday night, going over all the details of General Holway's trip to Washington. Governor Philipp is especially pleased that the men are not to be sent to Texas in the hot summer months, but that they will be in 'tip top' condition."

DEFENSE BOARD CAN GET SORGHUM SEED

Farmers Who Intend to Plant Sorghum and Want Seed Should Communicate With Secretary.

The Rock county council of defense has been informed by the state council that a quantity of sorghum seed is available for Wisconsin farmers. Those who desire to raise a crop of sorghum and want seed, they should communicate at once with Corresponding Secretary Frank P. Starr at the county clerk's office and give the order. It would be possible to materially reduce sugar bills of many homes if a supply of sorghum could be raised. The seed is also pointed out as valuable for stock feed. The price quoted for sorghum by the state defense council is ten cents a pound.
Buckwheat can also be secured for stock feed. Farmers who desire seed they should write to the fact known to Mr. Starr. Time for planting buckwheat is June 15 to July 1st.

JANESVILLE BOYS IN AMBULANCE UNIT

Tracy Allen and Louis Hayes to Leave for France With Field Hospital Company.

Tracy W. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Allen of Jackson street and Louis Hayes, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Hayes of South High street, have enlisted in Field Hospital Unit No. 4, and will leave next week for France. The unit has been formed at Northwestern University and is composed almost entirely of college men. It is in reality an ambulance company consisting of nearly one hundred men, but recently received ambulances and five large supply trucks.
The work of the company consists in getting the wounded men out of the trenches, administering first aid, and bringing wounded to the field hospitals maintained a short distance behind the lines.
Both Allen and Hayes have been in training with the unit for the past week. They will be home tomorrow before their departure for France in the immediate future. It is thought that the unit will be sent to Bordeaux, France, for a month's training before being sent to the front.

WAR SURGEON WILL GIVE LECTURE HERE

Dr. H. M. Richter in Illustrated Lecture Next Tuesday Evening.

Work of the surgeons and of the hospital units in the European war will be discussed by Dr. H. M. Richter in a lecture before the Rock County Medical society to be given next Tuesday evening at eight-fifteen at the Cargill Memorial M. E. church. Dr. Richter is a surgeon of national prominence and has recently returned from a six months' stay on the battle fronts of Europe. His talk will be illustrated by lantern slides taken on the field.
The lecture, while given under the auspices of the medical society, is open to the public, and a cordial invitation to all is extended to hear Dr. Richter. The address will not only be exceedingly interesting, but will give a clear idea of what is being accomplished by the medical profession in alleviating the suffering of the men.

A NEW VOLUME ABOUT THE WAR

THE publishers of The Encyclopaedia Britannica announce that they have made arrangements for the issue, as soon after the end of the war as possible, of a new volume, containing a full and authoritative history of the war. The new volume will be written by scholars and experts of the same high character as those who wrote for the Britannica itself, and by many of its own contributors. It will be absolutely impartial, excluding all partisan feeling and prejudice. It will contain

1. A judicial account of the real causes of the war, the progress of the struggle, and the results all over the world; with maps, as necessary, to show changes in boundaries.
2. The lives of the new leaders, whether civil, military or naval, in the belligerent countries.
3. The results of the war outside the sphere of fighting, the progress of surgery, the prevention of contagious disease, the new scientific discoveries, etc.

The new volume will bridge the gap between the days of peace before and after the war. It will be printed and bound to match the Britannica and the publishers guarantee that no matter how difficult and costly the supplementary volume may be from the editorial point of view, the price of it to all who purchase the Britannica during the present sale will not be more than that of a corresponding volume of the Britannica.

H. Sutherland President, to be followed by small, convenient monthly payments for a limited period.

IMPORTANT—PLEASE READ

As so few sets are left of The Encyclopaedia Britannica, "Handy Volume" Issue, printed on India paper, we are obliged to state that no order can be accepted with the privilege of returning the set. Any other course would be unfair to our customers and to ourselves. It is evident that we shall receive thousands of orders in excess of the number we can fill. To take back sets from some customers after refusing, for the want of stock, the orders of others, would be manifestly unjust to those whose orders were refused. It is understood, therefore, that this order for The Encyclopaedia Britannica is not subject to our usual rule of return of goods and refund of money. We guarantee delivery in perfect condition and that The Encyclopaedia Britannica will be exactly as represented. Please bear in mind that this is the condition on which we ask you to send in your order.

BANKERS ORGANIZE FOR PUSHING SALE OF LIBERTY BONDS

COUNTY ASSOCIATION ADOPTS PLAN OF ORGANIZATION TO REACH EVERY INDIVIDUAL IN COUNTY.

ALL MUST SUBSCRIBE

Janesville Alone Must Subscribe Between $240,000 and $300,000 of the Loan.

Have you subscribed to the Liberty Loan? Do you know that a loan of two billion dollars subscribed on a pro rata basis would mean a subscription of twenty dollars for every man, woman and child in the United States? Do you know that this loan calls for six to eight per cent of the bank resources of the United States? And that on either side of the Atlantic, the United States must subscribe between $240,000 and $300,000 before the fifteenth of June.

These were some of the facts emphasized at a meeting of the Rock County Bankers' association held last evening at the Grand Hotel to discuss the distribution of the loan throughout the county and to perfect an organization which will reach every corner of the county, into the shops and the factories and the farms.

There are in the United States but 200,000,000 people, and in the Rock County there are not more than 2,000,000 people who ever have been investors. A loan of two billion dollars demands at least 40,000 subscribers. "These must be created," said W. L. Ross of the Liberty Loan Distribution Committee and chairman of the Wisconsin Division of this Federal Reserve district, "that is the task before the bankers before the country at present. It is a tremendous job, but it must be done. The first loan must be taken up by the banks, and even today they hold seventy-five per cent of the money which is loaned. The loan must be made to the people, and the people must be made to realize the need for subscribing. It means either payment now, or the payment of the loan later to the enemy. It is either bonds or bondage."

"The only effective way of carrying publicity to all the people, of reaching the individual citizen, is through an organization which extends into all communities, which is representative, and which has the influence and energy to push it to a positive result. This is what we have found that the county organization was the most successful, in that it was founded upon a definite recognized unit, and was limited by geographical boundaries."

Accordingly the association voted to form a county executive committee to consist of the officers of the association with three other members to be named by them. In each of the various communities of the county, the association members will serve as local committees. These committees will be composed of members of the association, comprising the mayor or postmaster and influential men in all walks of life. Through them the publicity of the loan can be spread throughout the several districts of the county, and each vocational class can be reached by an individual of that group.

Mr. Ross further suggested that in addition to the county and local administrative committees, there should be named certain individuals in each community who in turn would appoint committees for handling the various phases of the bond distribution. One would confine its efforts to the securing of the subscriptions of the industrial interests; another would look after the mercantile interests; a third would take care of the churches; a fourth would be named for lodges, for farmers, for general publicity, and for the movies. It is expected that some such plan will be followed out in the near future.

A week or more ago it was realized that the Liberty Loan was not going as it should, said C. V. Price, in opening the discussion of the loan. It was realized that all interests must be united in putting it across. A meeting of bankers was held in Chicago to inspire enthusiasm among the members of the association, and the necessity of immediate action, and of an efficient organization. This has led up to the volunteering of a large number of financial institutions to the Liberty Loan, through various divisions of this federal reserve district to push the campaign.

It is the most important loan to be made because it is our first crack at the enemy. The real problem is to get to the individual, to the small investor, to get out the hoarded money, to inspire the individual to contribute this year, to bring the resources of the nation into work. It is our first drive, and it must be put over."

There is at this time over a thousand men in this district who are giving their time to this work, as Mr. Price and Mr. Price are doing here," continued Mr. Ross. "The work is divided into four main divisions, each of which a group is working. Their work is largely to get in touch with the bankers, because they are the ones at every county meeting. It is that all the money must come from the bank deposits.

"When at first the government thought of floating a five billion dollar loan, the financial people of the country looked to Washington and managed to impress the government with the impossibility of such an amount. The loan must not only be subscribed—and I believe there is no question about that—but it must be so oversubscribed that there will spring up spontaneously a loan of many times the amount. Bankers have all received instructions regarding details of taking subscriptions, so that there will be no great transfer of credit, and that the money may be kept in the community as long as possible. Sooner or later the money is bound to get to the industrial centers where the government is making its purchases. It will slowly filter out of the agricultural communities with this and into the great cities. Our only hope is to keep the money here as long as possible.

"The banks cannot take up too much of this loan; the country cannot stand so great a fixed investment made by the banks; their money must be free. The only way to avoid this is to get it to the people."

Besides the work to be done by the bankers, various patriotic organizations are boosting the subscription, and are among the men but among the women. Every club and society is being urged to take out bonds. Efforts are being made to have a representative at every county meeting. The loan must be floated. Within a few days a corps of speakers will appear at the theatres and movie houses to explain the details of subscription and the necessity of immediate action on the part of the people.

"It must be realized," said Mr. O. Monat, "that this is a loan to be taken up by the financial interests of the country. It is too great a thing for that. The men in the shops, the women, the farmers must all take their part. The floating of this loan is a necessity to the country's existence. The bonds are of such denomination that everyone can do his share, and it is the business of the bankers and the patriots of the country to see that all realize this."

The $2,000,000,000 Liberty Bond is issued to finance the United States during the war is divided so anyone can share in it. The bonds come in two forms, coupon and registered. Coupon bonds are the more popular, coming in denominations of $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. Principal and interest are payable to bearer and may be transferred from one person to another.

Registered bonds, in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000, $50,000 and $100,000, have the owner's name registered with the government, and interest is paid by check mailed direct from Washington. The owner may choose any form.

Further provision for the small investor is made in the participation certificates. Upon the payment of ten dollars such a certificate is issued. When five of these have been purchased they may be exchanged for a $50 bond. The certificates bear no interest, however.

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) A short time ago I went to a party. After I had seen all of the boys there, there was one I liked better than any of the rest. They were all strangers to me before I was introduced to them at the party. My girl friends said later that they could see I liked this boy better than any of the rest in the forepart of the evening he was real attentive to me, but in the later part he did not pay much attention to me. Do you think I should have divided my attentions more with the other boys?

(2) When I came to going home he never looked at me, but took my best girl friend home. The fellow who took me home I treated real cool.

He said I was the reason. I didn't speak. Was this the reason?

(3) I know a girl of fourteen. Her parents don't even like her to speak to a boy. As a result she sits out and goes with fellows and to parties. She has some of the best fellows in town for her friends. She is large for her age and wears her hair in waves. She would easily pass for seventeen. I have pleaded with her, trying to get her to do different, but she won't. I am considerably older than she is, but she confides in me. Should I continue to try to help her do right?

(4) You certainly should have divided your interest among the boys. The boy thought you were running after him and he found it distasteful and so he lost interest in you.

(5) You should not have treated that boy who took you home so coolly. You should have appreciated his kindness. It is your place to speak first and not last. Of course he really ought to look at if he wanted you to speak by showing some sign of recognition in the expression of his face.

(6) Continue to be a friend of the girl. After telling her that you disapproved of her going with boys against her parents' wishes there is really nothing more you can do. If you say too much she will think you are preaching and will not value your opinion at all. She is making a great mistake of course, and will have to pay for it later. A girl so young has not very good judgment. Things that she will regret as she grows older.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a high school girl of eighteen. For over two years I have been keeping company with a young man one year my senior. I love him very much. A start going with him when I was a sophomore and went to all the school parties, entertainments and concerts, and had at least three dates a week with him. You can see that I grew very well acquainted and grew to love each other. He is the finest boy in the world, it seems to me. When we had been going to together for about a year he asked to kiss me good-night one night, but I said no. This was the first time he had ever tried to kiss me and I had been going with him for a year. About two months later he asked me again if he might kiss me, and I said I couldn't let him do it. After four months he asked me again and with the same result.

He did not ask me again until about three months ago, and then when I said no, he said, "Why, what's the matter with you anyway, dear?" Don't you think under the circumstances of our going together so long and being with him so much that I ought to let him kiss me good-night? He hasn't gone with any other girl for over two years. He isn't in the habit of kissing every Tom, Dick and Harry. Should I give him the little privilege, seeing we are so well acquainted? Don't be too strict; remember a boy and a girl have to get some loving once in a while.

You will probably think that I am "too strict," but I must advise you not to kiss him unless you and he become engaged, and of the both of you are too young for that now.

Household Hints

BREADS

Peanut Butter Bread—Sift two cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt; add one cup peanut butter, one-half cup sugar. Beat two eggs with one cup milk, add to other ingredients and mix. Pour into oiled pan and bake thirty to thirty-five minutes.

Peanut Rolls—Sift two cups flour, two cups graham flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one and one-half teaspoons salt. Dissolve one-half cup peanut butter in one and one-half cups cold water. Stir together and add one cup chopped peanuts and roll three-fourths inch thick. Cut out and bake fifteen to twenty minutes.

Paris Buns—Good and economical!—One cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one tablespoon sugar, a little salt, one tablespoon each of butter and lard, one egg, milk and a little essence of lemon or vanilla. Sift flour and baking powder, salt and sugar; cut in butter and lard back to back; add one cup milk with milk; add the essence, pour over flour mixture and mix. Grease baking tin. Make dough into little balls, brush with milk and sprinkle with little sugar and bake in a moderate oven until a nice brown. Raisins may be added by way of a change.

Graham Bread—One cup wheat flour, half teacup molasses, half cake compressed yeast dissolved in half teacup lukewarm water, one teacup salt, one teacup sugar. Add sufficient graham flour to make the dough stiff as can be stirred with a strong spoon. This is to be mixed at night; in the morning mix well and pour into two well oiled pans—they will be about half full. Let it stand in warm place until it rises to the top of pans, then bake in plenty of steam. The bread will be covered about twenty minutes when first put into the oven with a thick brown paper or tin cover to prevent upper crust from becoming too brown. When the bread is done the loaf is well risen. If these directions are correctly followed the bread will not be heavy or sodden.

BARLEY CUTS COST.

In these days of high cost of food why not use barley? The cost is small.

One cup of barley with 15 cents or 20 cents worth of boiling beef will make soup enough for six people. Each 12 cent box contains three cups.

One way of cooking it is to cook with Hamburg steak and tomatoes and seasoning, cooked thick.

It requires just one hour to cook.

If any plain cooked barley is left over it can be made into appetizing griddle cakes or gems by taking one cup of cold cooked barley, one-half cup flour, one egg, one-half teacup salt, one teacup sugar, one teacup milk, one-quarter teacup oil. Mix with one-half water and one-half milk to a thin batter and cook at once on a hot griddle. Pour gems bake in a gem pan.

FUR STORAGE

If you have a worn out refrigerator, clean it thoroughly, remove draught pipe and solder a piece of tin over the hole so that no insects can get in.

It will afford no better place to store furs and winter clothing and is an equally desirable place for summer hats and other finery during the winter.

ITALIAN GNOCCHI

A palatable Italian dish is made up of one-quarter cup of cornstarch, one-quarter cup of flour, two cups of milk scalded, one-quarter cup of butter, one cup of grated cheese, two egg yolks and one-half teacup each of salt and paprika.

Mix together the cornstarch, flour, salt and pepper, and add gradually the scalded milk; cook in a double boiler twenty minutes, and stir until thick. Beat the egg yolks with a fork.

cream butter, add one-half cup of grated cheese, and stir into the cornstarch mixture. When the cheese is thoroughly melted pour the mixture into a shallow dish to one-half inch in thickness. Allow it to cool, then cut into squares or diamond shapes. Serve with a sprinkling of the rest of the grated cheese. If desired this can be reheated in the oven.

A want ad will rent that house.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

(Miss Hoyt will answer personally all letters pertaining to matters of etiquette addressed to her in care of this paper, if accompanied by a two cent stamp.)

It is bad taste to talk of fevers to a physician, or stocks to a broker, or in fact, to talk shop of any kind. Conversation ought not to relate to domestic affairs. Yet as people take more interest in their own affairs than in anything else, it is tactful to lead a mother to speak of her children, or a young lady to speak of her summer at a watering place.

Mrs. M. S. T.: Only relatives and intimate friends need send gifts to a couple celebrating their golden wedding anniversary. If you do send a gift, it is not necessary that it should be of gold. Only the color of the metal need be suggested in the gift. It may be a piece of gilded china or glass, or some article made of yellow silk, perhaps embroidered with gold thread. A bouquet of yellow flowers is always appropriate. In these days, a request that no gifts be sent often accompanies an invitation to a wedding anniversary celebration.

Elsie B.: Yes, a young woman may ask a young man to call again if she wishes him to do so. When he takes leave, she may tell him that she would be glad to have him call again. No, she must not help him with his overcoat, even if he does have to struggle to get into it.

His Word For It.

There was an old lecturing domine who was strong in astronomical similitudes and calculations. "Arcturus," he would declare, "is 782,645,925 miles distant from the sun."

"But, domine," some surprised auditor would interrogate, "how in the world do you arrive at these specific figures?"

The answer would come with crushing dignity and the tone of intellectual superiority: "I assert it, sir. Disprove it if you can."

The Business of Living

Patty Becomes a Bride and is Happy On the Threshold of Her Great Sacrifice.

Patty's wedding was very simple and pretty Margaret was in the height of bliss, because she was to be flower girl and wear a new white dress given to her by Aunt Patty. Then, too, she was to have the ring in her basket and present it when needed. The little maid was firmly convinced that Aunt Patty could not be properly married without her.

Patty succeeded in driving away all sorrowful thoughts of the future. Indeed she seldom had sorrowful thoughts when Eleanora was with her, and she looked very lovely as she lovingly repeated the wedding vow, looking steadily into her husband's face the while.

"Wasn't it a perfect wedding?" said Eleanora after the bride and groom had been safely stowed into a taxi. "These family weddings allow everybody to be natural and no one is under any nervous tension." "It never saw Patty look so well," admitted Douglas. "She was almost a beauty." This was extensive praise for Douglas rarely paid compliments—that is, except to his wife.

"Love is a great beautifier, and love shone out of her face transfiguring it," was Eleanora's enthusiastic answer.

"I never saw anything more charming than the way Margaret held out the ring. The minister smiled as he took it. Her face was so calm, and she was so utterly unconscious."

"Those children will be sick if they eat any more ice cream tonight," reminded Douglas, and Eleanora flew to the kitchen to prevent such a catastrophe.

When both children had been put to bed with a piece of bride's cake under their pillows to dream on, the kitchen had been put to rights. Eleanora came in and dropped down on the arm of her husband's chair.

"I love a wedding," she murmured, laying her cheek against her husband's hair.

"Most women do," he replied patting her hand. "There is so much sentiment connected with a wedding."

"It means so much more to a woman than it does to a man," she said, looking at him.

"It always makes me mad to hear that statement," Douglas edged into his wife's face. "You know it isn't so. What makes you repeat such rot?"

"Oh, I suppose marriage is as much a part of your life as of mine," admitted Eleanora, "but to many men it is merely an incident."

"How about some women? Are all women devoted wives and mothers? Why generalize? The fact is, if a marriage is a real marriage, it means as much to the man as it does to the woman, and if it is not a real marriage it means nothing but misery to everybody concerned. It is an instance of the thoughtlessness of the human race. Some one made that statement and the unthinking public accepted it and repeated it and believed it." Douglas laid his wife's hand against his cheek.

"But don't you think it is harder for the woman if the marriage is a failure. She has nothing but her home to center her thoughts on." "Perhaps, but she might center them on other things. She has as much of her own mind as the man has to follow out her ideas, unless she has children to live for. It is broad as it is long, I guess," Douglas smiled into the sweet earnest face above him.

"I believe you are right," Eleanora admitted. "Anyway, I feel very sorry for the people who are unhappily married. We have the best, the very best that life affords when we have each other and know that neither of us need anything outside of our home to make us happy."

A LITTLE MIXED.

Young Man—What do you think of Simpson?

Old Gent—Simpson? Simpson, sir? Why, he is one of those people that smack you on the back before your face, and hit you in the eye behind your back!

"A baby is often afraid over nothing. On the contrary, he might face real danger without a blink."

Not infrequently he keeps those habits up all through life.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Catching Animosities.

Speaking of animosities (once more) did you ever stop to think how many of your animosities you inherit or borrow or catch? Not just the way you catch measles or a cold but by the mental contagion, the way you catch an affection of speech or a slight expression.

A woman just passed by the house and I looked at her with the vague feeling of antagonism that her presence always arouses. Then I noticed how pleasantly she was smiling to someone across the street. I heard her speak and thought how attractive her voice was, and all at once I found myself looking at her with new eyes, seeing how pleasant she looked and wondering why on earth I disliked her, since after all I scarcely knew her.

I had been infected with the Dislike Germ.

And then I remembered that a friend who dislikes her had infected me with her dislike.

I was ashamed of myself.

First hand dislikes with some reason to them are bad enough, but second hand dislikes are terribly shabby unattractive things to have about one's house of life.

Disliking People He Didn't Even Know.

A man who came to live in the town where his wife had been brought up told me that he found himself with a lot of queer little animosities on his mind and that he was really quite shocked at himself when he found that he had permitted his wife to form his opinion of people he didn't really know at all. He made up his mind to throw these foolish little animosities out bag and baggage, start all over again and dislike for himself if he must dislike at all.

Some Families Dislike As A Unit.

Whole families often dislike as a unit. Family jealousy is a splendid thing when it means keeping each other's secrets and standing up for each other through thick and thin, but I can't say I think this manifestation of it particularly praiseworthy.

Animosities are "freelance" little things anyway, but somehow there are people who are temperamentally antipathetic to us and such antipathies can be explained if not wholly justified.

But as for going out and borrowing animosities, why that's as foolish as borrowing a cold in the head or a crimson rambler (do you recognize him under that euphonious name?)

The Week End Rest for the Weak

There are thousands of young people who are a little frail, below par not quite sure whether or not they have incipient pulmonary tuberculosis, indigestion, nervous, perhaps anemic, or just weak constitution. For such young people there is much to be gained from the week end in bed. Especially of nervous exhaustion or neurasthenia is a symptom.

The popular name for pulmonary tuberculosis, consumption, signifies that excessive demands upon the body substance causes excessive waste of tissue. Tissue is conserved by rest.

No matter what the diagnosis, if weight is below the normal average for age and height, and especially if there is lack of nervous energy, rest in bed is a good remedy. And no matter what the diagnosis, if this bed rest can be had in the open air, on a porch or otherwise, it is sure to do good. Going to bed for a day or two is simply putting away savings against a rainy day.

A great many people engage in strenuous brain work which entails a heavy output of nervous energy have discovered that it pays to stay in bed a day or two, to frequent intervals.

People commonly harbor the notion that rest in bed causes weakness. This is an illusion based upon the fact that confining illness leaves the victim weak. When one voluntarily remains in bed a day or a week or many weeks for the sake of conserving health, the result is increased strength, as many tuberculous patients have discovered to their joy.

Every movement of the body consumes a certain amount of energy. Fat or protein must be burned up to supply the energy. Lots of people are nervous and weak because they are always on the move, because they fail to obtain enough rest in bed or sitting down. More energy is used up in sitting down the desire to conserve the utmost energy, lie abed and grow fat.

Lie abed a little later mornings. Get to bed a little earlier evenings. Take a siesta afternoons. If you can't sleep, no matter. Lie down and keep perfectly quiet. Train your nervous system to keep quiet for a while. It is excellent training in self-control.

The week end rest begins as soon as you get home on Saturday, and lasts until you have to get back to the job Monday. Get right into bed and stay there. Have all food served in bed. No visiting. No talk. Just keep quiet and doze the time away. At the most, let some one read some good light literature for you.

Monday morning you will find that you have found new vigor and strength for the week's work.

I ALMOST got acquainted WITH A charming man at a DINNER PARTY last evening but THE WOMAN who sat between US HAD spent too much MONEY FOR hair that had BELONGED to others. EVERY PLEASANTRY of mine WAS EITHER hooked by A CURL or deflected by A FALSE puff. Then, too, I FANCIED THAT all of the ORIGINAL OWNERS of that ASSORTMENT of hair were listening TO OUR conversation and it EMBARRASSED ME. Why in THE WORLD more women don't LEARN OF HERPICIDE and TRY FOR the home grown VARIETY OF hair is a MYSTERY to me.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Breaking Off the Petrolatum.

I noticed you advised some one to take liquid petrolatum (mineral oil) for three months, and then stop it for a while. Does that mean there is any danger in taking it habitually, year after year out? (A. L.)

ANSWER.—No. The stuff is probably harmless. But in many instances, if it is taken regularly for a few weeks, then discontinued, the patient finds that a natural habit has been re-established, and the oil is no longer required. Why use it if it isn't needed?

Rheumatiz, Baths, Mt.

Kindly advise me whether you think electric baths or a sojourn at Mt. would be preferable for one with rheumatism of the back and kidneys. (C. T. R.)

ANSWER.—If I were the unucky patient, I think I should first consult a good doctor. Of course a good doctor never tells a patient she has rheumatism of the back and kidneys!

CIVIL ENGINEER
Copyright by Fleming H. Revell Company

Winters, who saw now greatly overwrought and unstrung his friend was, contented himself with the assertion. He did not press the point or argue it with him. He rested quietly confident that matters would right themselves some way in the long run. He treated Meade exactly right. He left him to his own devices. He did not force his company upon him. Sometimes the engineer would mount a horse—and all at the ranch were at his disposal—and would ride away into the woods and mountains with a camping outfit. Sometimes he would be gone for several days, coming back white and haggard and exhausted but victor in some hard battle fought out alone.

One day there came to the ranch a letter to Winters from Rodney, full of friendly chat and pleasant reminiscence.

"Meade has disappeared absolutely," wrote Rodney in closing. "Even Miss Illingworth, to whom he was reported engaged and upon whom I have called occasionally, says she does not know his whereabouts. Of course you saw in the papers his connection with the tragedy and failure of the International. Although his frank statement was corroborated by that of the older Meade's private secretary, I have never been able to believe it, neither does Miss Illingworth. I know Bert, and so does she. We can't accept even his own testimony. We have been working together to establish the truth, but with very faint prospects of success so far. There's some tremendous mystery about it. I have thought that maybe Meade might have come to you. If he has show him this letter and beg him to tell us the truth at any rate."

Winters passed the letter over to Meade without comment. The engineer read it with passionate eagerness. He was hungry for any news of Helen Illingworth. Rodney was called upon her. A sharp pang of jealousy shot through him at that, although he knew there was no reason. Dear old Rodney! He could see his grave face, his disapproving manner, his air of unbelief, as he had taken down Meade's words in the office that tragic day.

Of course, Helen Illingworth was not a recluse as he was. She mingled in society. She took up life with its demands. She entered into its pleasures and fulfilled its duties. He was jealous of everyone who might come in contact with her, but he knew the names of none except Rodney.

And they were suspicious of his avowal. That was bad to his soul. Of course Helen Illingworth was suspicious, but why should Rodney doubt his assumption of the blame? And they were working to establish his innocence. The thought disgusted him lest they should discover the truth in some way. And it gave him joy also. They would work despite any remonstrance from him. He thought of that protest to his father always with uneasiness. If he could only have found it and destroyed it himself he would have been happier. Could it be in existence somewhere? Would it turn up? Would they unnerve it? Well, he had done his best for his father, yet he was glad those two disbelieved and were working for him.

Meade had been the most brilliant, Winters the most indifferent, Rodney the most persevering, of the trio at college. He remembered that well. His first thought was to forbid Rodney to do anything further, although how far his friend would respect his wishes he could not tell. Anyway, he did not have to decide that matter, because he could not say a word to him. To have allowed Winters to write would have betrayed his whereabouts. He was living with Winters under an assumed name of course. He had had his hair cut differently and had grown a beard and mustache. He thought it would have taken a keen eye indeed to have recognized him with these changes.

In the end he handed the letter back to Winters, only charging him that if he wrote to Rodney he must not betray the fact that Meade was with him. He had plenty of time to think over the situation. He decided finally that so long as he had been born an engineer and trained and educated as an engineer he would have to be until the end of the chapter. He would go out and seek work, not such work as his ability and experience, but under some assumed name he would begin at the very beginning, at the foot of the ladder as a rodman, if he could; and then he would work on quietly, faithfully, obscurely, praying for his chance. If it came he would strive to be equal to the opportunity; if it did not at least he would be engaged in honest work in an honest way.

It was a very humble program, not at all promising or heroic or romantic, just a beginning. He would work on and wait. They say that all things come to him who waits. That is only half true. Some things come to him who waits sometimes. That is more nearly accurate. Well, he could think of no better plan. So he bade Winters good-by, swearing him again to secrecy until he should lift the ban against speech, and rode away. When he got to the little village on the Pickett Wire below the dam he stopped a long time gazing at the long bridge, or viaduct, of steel that was replacing the old wooden trestle and carrying the railroad from the hills to the eastward over the river.

It was not such an undertaking as the last International, still it was interesting engineering construction. It was work that would be intensely congenial, to which he was drawn almost irresistibly, yet he managed to hold himself aloof. The Martlet people were building this steel bridge and they had just finished the arch up under the mess. A well-known construction company was building the great earth dam across the Pickett Wire in the valley.

Meade's engineering life had been spent mainly out of the United States. He had never been connected with the Martlet and its employees until he had been associated with his father on the International. He could have gone among them with little danger of immediate discovery, since most of the men he had known had gone down with the bridge, but he decided not to do so. The work on the dam would be simpler and he would have less opportunity to betray himself and it would give him more chance to work up in a plausible and reasonable way. Besides, if Colonel Illingworth came on to inspect the bridge, as he would probably do, Meade would have to leave before his arrival. The dam would be safer. No one would ever think of looking for him there. And no one would ever recognize in the rough-bearded workman the clear-cut, smooth-faced young engineer of other days.

The dam was twenty miles up the valley. Yes, he would be less apt to be observed working there than on the bridge. Yet as he recalled that private car and that it might come there, he realized that she might be on it. His heart leaped even as it had leaped at the sight of the viaduct then building, as it had quivered to the familiar rat-tat-tat of the pneumatic riveters and the clang and the clash of the structural steel. But what was the use? He would not dare trust himself to look at her even from a distance. No, it was the dam that best suited his purpose, so he turned away from the bridge and rode up the valley. There he was fortunate in falling into a position, as has been set forth.

CHAPTER XII.

Marshaling the Evidence.

For all her sweetness and light, Helen Illingworth was dowered with intense energy and a powerful will. What she began she finished, and she was not deterred from beginning things by fears of consequences. She was convinced that Meade had not told the truth in that famous declaration in his father's office. She respected him for his desire to shield his father's name and fame even at the expense of his veracity, albeit she would not have been a woman if she had not resented the fact that in so doing he had sacrificed her happiness as well as his own. The question whether Meade, Jr., was the more responsible or even responsible at all was more or less academic to Colonel Illingworth. He would have had nothing further to do with either of them if both were living, and certainly not with the younger survivor. He tried to believe that if it had come to a final choice the daughter, in spite of the fact that such is the habit of women in the experience of life, would not have given up age and her father for youth and her lover. Indeed she was too genuinely devoted to her father to do that except as a last resort.

She cherished the hope first, that Meade could re-establish himself—she had too sweeping a confidence in his character and capacity to doubt that—and second, that it could be shown that he had not been responsible for the failure of the bridge. She was more and more convinced that his assumption of being a fit subject for censure and condemnation, he merited admiration and applause. She hoped with her woman's wit to prove this eventually, perhaps in spite of her lover, and to this end she applied herself assiduously to solve the problem.

To her, at her request, came Rodney. Now the reporters had dealt very gently with Helen Illingworth. They had made no announcement of the engagement or of its breaking at her father's earnest request. There was no necessity of bringing her into the bridge story, although it would have added a dramatic touch to their narratives. Her inclination had been to avow it. But upon reflection she saw it would have annoyed her father beyond expression, it would not have helped Meade any and it might hamper her in her work. She realized that she had Rodney to thank for this omission and after she had time to collect herself she asked him to call upon her. He was very glad to come.

"I sent for you, Mr. Rodney, on account of Mr. Bertram Meade," she began, after thanking him for his courtesy toward her the day the older Meade died and thereafter. "I want you to help me."

"I shall be delighted to do so for your own sake. I know how deeply interested you are in Meade's rehabilitation."

"Mr. Rodney," returned the woman, flushing a little, "you know of course that we were engaged. He considers the engagement broken."

"I suppose so. That would be like him," said Rodney gravely. "Indeed as a man of honor he could do no less."

"You are all alike," said the woman a little bitterly. "Your notions are supreme. You may sacrifice love and your best friend so long as you preserve those notions of honor intact."

"And yet if we weren't honorable men you wouldn't care for us at all." "Yes, I suppose that's it. Well, I do care very much, as you understand. I may as well be frank with you. My father, of course, is bitterly antagonistic to Mr. Meade. He won't even allow his name to be mentioned."

"One can hardly blame him for that," Miss Illingworth said. "The failure of the bridge seriously embarrassed the Martlet Bridge company, and it is a great handicap for them to overcome in seeking any further contracts."

"But I did not summon you here to discuss the affairs of the Martlet Bridge company," said Helen, "interesting though they may be, but to see if by working together there was not some way by which we could prove that Bertram Meade has assumed the blame to save the honor and fame of his father."

"You believe that, Miss Illingworth?"

"I am sure of it."

"So am I," said Rodney quickly.

"Thank God," cried the girl a little hysterically, surprised and almost swept off her feet by this prompt avowal by one who, though young, was already an authority in the literature of engineering. "Why do you say that? What evidence have you?"

"Unfortunately," answered Rodney, "I haven't any tangible evidence whatever, but I know Bert Meade as few people know him, Miss Illingworth, perhaps not even you," he went on, in spite of her unspoken, but vigorous protest at that last statement, as she shook her head and smiled at him. "And there are several little circumstances that make me feel that he could not have been to blame. Have you any ground for your conviction?"

"Probably even less than you have and yet I, too, know him," Helen Illingworth looked into the plain, homely, but strong, reliable face of the man and dismissed any thought of reserve from her mind.

"Let us place," she began, "the little circumstances upon which our intuitions are based, if intuitions are ever based on anything tangible, together. Perhaps the sum of them may yield something."

"The suggestion is admirable," asserted Rodney, "and as I knew him first and longest I will begin. Perhaps it would be well, too, to take notes that we may consider them at leisure, getting an eye view as well as an ear view of them."

A SOLDIER MUST BE A GOOD MIXER IN CAMP

By CAPTAIN GEORGE L. KILMER.

Not alone for his happiness, but for his value to the flag, the soldier must be a good mixer. He lives, marches and fights, keeping at touch of elbow with comrades. Among other things this means that he himself and every part of him should know his and its place and take it automatically.

In cavalry and artillery the individual has freer play of body than in infantry, where for all movements in line formation he has space of but three feet (about).

Good training may be had by standing in line on the feet, heels together and toes a foot apart, the body at full height, with arms vertical. From this position bend forward as far as possible, with knees rigid. Then straighten up, with arms erect and vertical. In the heat of action this training contributes to coolness and precision, also to good order in the ranks. Just as the soldier must stand straight in the line, keep to his own space and regard his fellow on the right, left, front and rear, so in the quarters, the company street or in open bivouac he must avoid all selfish go-as-you-please conduct.

The soldier is to be one of an army of 100,000 men, a little piece of a vast machine, and must fit into his particular place with the nicety of the teeth and grooves of a cogwheel. All of this while in line and on duty, without warning other than a signal. Then comes the order "Port arms!" Banks dissolve, and the soldier is again one of a family of 100, a society of 1,000 fellows, all as good as himself. Socially the troops must be democratic.

"You believe that, Miss Illingworth?" "I am sure of it."

"So am I," said Rodney quickly.

"Thank God," cried the girl a little hysterically, surprised and almost swept off her feet by this prompt avowal by one who, though young, was already an authority in the literature of engineering. "Why do you say that? What evidence have you?"

5,000 VOICES

And Many Are The Voices Of Janesville People.

Fifty thousand voices—What a grand chorus! And that's the number of American men and women, who are publicly praising Doan's Kidney Pills for relief from backache, kidney and bladder ills. They say it to friends. They tell it in the home papers. Janesville people are in this chorus.

Here's a Janesville case: F. C. Samuels, grocer, 889 McKee Boulevard, says: "I know from personal experience that Doan's Kidney Pills are all right. My kidneys didn't act as they should and I had backache and pains across my loins. I used two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and was relieved. Since then I haven't had any more backache and my kidneys have been doing their work right. I think just as highly of Doan's Kidney Pills now as I did a few years ago when I first recommended them."

"Do you think," she asked hesitatingly, "do you think it proper that I should be at his bedside during his last moments?"

"Yes, but I advise you to hurry, madam! The best places are already taken."

CONTROL BY BREWERS IS GROWING IRKSOME

GOVERNOR'S VETO OF EVJUE BILL STIRS STATE'S RESENTMENT TO LIQUOR MEN'S DOMINATION.

SOCIALISTS EXPELLED

Gaylord and Simons Read Out of Their Party for Opposing St. Louis Statement on War—Badger Women Organize.

By Ellis B. Usher.

Milwaukee, May 26.—The veto of the Evjue bill and the various proposals of the executive on the general subject of liquor laws have this week marked a new stage of activities of the brewing interests in this state. The Evjue referendum bill is now to be succeeded by a proposition to prohibit "hard liquor" and permit beer and light wines a free field. This will, of course, divide the brewers and distillers of whiskey and the saloons that sell "hard liquor" and are now under domination of the brewers. The brewing interest has, for the past two years especially, largely dominated legislative action on all subjects. They have ruled wisely and their present condition does not seem promising. The real trouble is that the patriotic citizens of Wisconsin have discovered that the brewers have been the back of the German-American Alliance, and of other things of that sinister nature. Among sound Americans, regardless of race, they have consistently lost standing. Their future is no longer imperilled by prohibition alone. A word with "the man in the street," or in the drinking room for that matter, will convince any inquirer that a "bone dry" law would be a surprisingly big vote in Wisconsin, and the veto of the Evjue bill will only postpone a little and it is possible increase the force of the blow that will surely fall. Wisconsin is awfully tired of the kind of government the brewing interest has been giving it, both in Madison and in Washington. There is no need of heat or excitement. The brewers have for some time been doomed, and they are now, as they long have been, their own most efficient enemies.

The announcement from Washington that Victor Berger and two other Socialists who proposed to go to Stockholm to attend an alleged international peace conference, will not be given passports, and the warning accompanying the semi-official statement that such a mission would be treasonable, is worthy of note in Wisconsin. Wednesday evening the Milwaukee Socialists expelled A. M. Simons and Winfield R. Gaylord, because they are Americans who regard the St. Louis Socialist platform as treasonable. This action marks the culmination of a controversy that has been going on for some time, and eliminates from the local Socialist organization the men who believe in this country and its institutions rather than in German autocracy. Taken in connection with the news from Washington above alluded to, the support of Wisconsin Socialists for any measure or policy should hereafter be open to the gravest suspicion.

Wisconsin women who are anxious to be of service to their country can start doing their "bit" by investigating the work being done by the National League for Woman's Service and setting women in their community to organize and join the groups of women who have already set fifteen wheels of this important organization revolving in the state. Since April 9, when the state headquarters were established in Milwaukee, branches have been organized in the following cities: Burlington, La Crosse, Lancaster, Manitowish, Mukwonago, Port Washington, Racine, Ripon, Watertown, Waukesha, Wausau, Marshfield, Oconomowoc, and Waterville. One enthusiastic worker, Mrs. E. B. Frost, Williams Bay, is organizing all of Walworth county.

The object of the National League for Woman's Service which came into being in Washington, D. C., on January 27, when this country was still at peace, is, as stated in its constitution:

"To co-ordinate and standardize the work of women of America along lines of constructive patriotism; to develop the resources and to promote the efficiency of women in meeting their every-day responsibilities to home, to state, to nation and to humanity; to provide organized trained groups in every community prepared to co-operate with the Red Cross and other agencies in dealing with any calamity—fire, flood, famine, economic disorder, etc., and in time of war to supplement the work of the Red Cross, the army and navy, and to deal with questions of women's work and women's welfare."

Five days after the league came into existence the nation was confronted with a crisis in its affairs with Germany and the possibility of an immediate emergency. An emergency program was at once developed under which women throughout the country are now organizing for immediate service. The national office appoints a chairman in each state and the state chairman appoints local chairmen within her state. Under this emergency plan there are no charter fees and no membership dues. Each community should furnish the financial support for its own local work. Any existing organization of women in a community may organize within its membership disbursements of the National League for Woman's Service without giving up its own work or losing its own identity. In Milwaukee and vicinity one hundred and sixty club and organizations, a total enrollment of 15,000 women, are affiliated with the Wisconsin branch of the league. Women of all nationalities, religious and political affiliations have joined forces. The broad spirit of co-operation is the keynote to the success of the nationwide movement. The Milwaukee organization was started by the League of Patriotic Women of Milwaukee which in its turn was organized on March 7 by representatives of various women's organizations in Milwaukee and vicinity who gathered in response to an invitation of the Women's Club of Wisconsin. The members of the Patriotic League, which at that time had no connection whatever with the National League for Woman's Service, was offered the mayor of Milwaukee for its emergency in time of war. Shortly afterwards the Patriotic League was asked to affiliate with the National League for Woman's Service and to carry on the work of organizing the state. Upon receiving a favorable answer, the national office, now located in New York, appointed Mrs. John W. Mariner (at that time president of the League for Patriotic Women of Milwaukee) state chairman. Mrs. Mariner appointed a state committee consisting of officers and members of the Patriotic League, which is now a part of the National League for Woman's Service in Wisconsin. At present the emergency program of the league in Wisconsin and the middle west deals chiefly with the production and conservation of food. In Milwaukee work on model homes and vacant lot gardens is in full swing and plans for canning products this summer are under way. School kitchens will be used for canning the food, which will be transported from garden to school by volunteer auto squads now being formed. The canned products will be kept to meet the exigencies that will arise next winter from food shortage.

The work of the league is not confined to gardening. The Milwaukee branch has been authorized by the National League to furnish knitted sleeveless jackets, mufflers and wrist-lets for the sailors on the battleship "Wisconsin." Sets for 375, the ship's complement, may be turned in. Wool for these sets costs $2. This, and instructions can be obtained by writing to state headquarters in Milwaukee. The league works in close co-operation with the national Red Cross society. All registrations for medical, nursing and hospital work-room work are referred immediately to that organization.

The state headquarters of the National League for Women's Service are at 428 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee, where complete information may be secured.

In a communication to the Madison Democrat Bryan J. Castle illustrates what has happened in Madison and what is going on in every Wisconsin city. He shows that in 1900 the assessment of Madison was $3,403,909; tax rate, .021. In 1905, $20,507,565; rate, .015. In 1910, $25,535,700; rate, .0165. In the meantime bonded indebtedness has risen from $333,300 to $1,519,000. But that is not the whole story. During this period Madison has enjoyed other blessings with the rest of us. The state income tax has been invented. Inheritance taxes have come into being. Railroads, that then paid $1,547,000, now pay three times that. So with other corporations. How many citizens of Madison are really able to bear three or four times the public burden they bore sixteen years ago? The answer to that question is the real measure of the justice of this sort of thing. It will come to speedy reckoning now. When 18,000 or 20,000 of our most active young men go to war, and it requires, the estimates say, five people behind the firing line to keep each one of them supplied with munitions, food and clothing, then the people will, in addition to this already great burden, have $3 a head of government taxes to carry and 120,000 people withdrawn from productive industries to engage in works of destruction. And we have only our second taste of government war taxes. The problem is a real one. It can no longer be covered up by great "progress" or prosperity. It may, before many months begin to pluck some people. It therefore behooves those who make our laws to meet the facts. If they dodge them the people will pay the penalty and they should be lightened of all needless burdens at a time when special sacrifice is required of everybody. There are many taxes that, under our laws, increase automatically with the constant rise of assessments. Every such law should be repealed. Last year the university had an increase of this sort of about $150,000.

Legislators should bear one fact in mind when thinking about the "conscription of money." Every dollar needlessly taken from the poor man in taxes may be bringing him or his family nearer to the verge of becoming a public charge, and every dollar needlessly taken from the man of productive business activity may take it away from business employment. Neither can be unduly or needlessly burdened without dividing the penalty with everybody. No real man wants to shirk his patriotic duty and for that very reason his duty should now be measured by national necessities and not by local extravagances.

"A Student in Arms," by Donald Hankey, recently published by E. P. Dutton & Company, New York, is a collection of sketches and essays written from the trenches, which originally appeared in the London Spectator. The nobility of the ordinary man at the front is the theme which binds together the twenty short chapters describing him under varying aspects, in his relation to the business at hand and also in his attitude toward the larger ideas of democracy and religion. The writer's directness and sincerity make this a very stimulating book. It suggests the moral exaltation that is certainly one, and often a neglected and unnoticed aspect, of the too sorry and grim business of the soldier.

CHINESE PLAN RED CROSS AID TO U. S. AND ALLIES

Peking, May 26.—Plans to send a Chinese Red Cross contingent to the European battle fronts to assist American and allied Red Cross workers are being considered here today. Following a suggestion from President Chin of the Chinese society, with headquarters at Shanghai, President Li Yuan-hung has passed favorably on the idea and ordered the finance department to furnish the necessary money.

NEW JAP OCEAN LINE TO RELIEVE BIG CONGESTION

Tokyo, May 26.—In order to relieve the freight congestion on both the Japanese and American sides of the Pacific, the Hippon Yusen Kaisha, Japan's largest steamship company, announced today that it was prepared to place five newly chartered vessels on the run from Yokohama to Seattle. More than 80,000 tons of goods, valued approximately at $5,000,000, are piled on the docks at Yokohama and Kobe, awaiting shipment to America.

LOCKJAW ONLY POSSIBILITY TO SAVE THIS MILLION

Washington, May 26.—The world's chewing gum bill this year will be well over $1,000,000, and most of that money will come to the United States, according to commerce department figures today. This country is the biggest producer. Europe's consumption of chicle is growing tremendously—in the first part of this fiscal year European nations exercised their mastoid muscles on $696,049 worth. North American countries were second with $103,997. Oceania was third—$78,020.

These figures show that the folks way down in South America are acquainted with the delights of the untiring jawbone, for they invested $17,361. The Africans spent $16,905 for American gum, and even the "heathen Chinese" and the Japs, and the poor Indian, sank their molars in the sticky substance, as Asia's bill was $14,588.

SIDE LIGHTS on the CIRCUS BUSINESS

By D. W. WATT
Former Manager Burr Robbins and Later Treasurer of Adam Forepaugh Circuses.

(Copyrighted.)
A few days ago I stepped into a business house in Janesville, where I met one of the proprietors, who was talking to a traveling man, and he introduced me to the gentleman, whose name was J. H. Dieter of St. Louis. At this moment the proprietor was called away and Mr. Dieter and I were left alone for a visit. When I asked him if he had always lived in St. Louis, he said: "No, indeed, I have only lived in St. Louis about twenty years, and as I am now sixty years of age, I spent the other forty years or more in Philadelphia."
When I asked him what part of Philadelphia he lived in, he told me that their old home was on Spring Garden street, near the winter quarters of the old Adam Forepaugh circus. When I told him that I had put in several years as ticket agent and treasurer of that show and knew something about Philadelphia, we were soon engaged in a heart to heart talk of incidents that happened in Philadelphia more than thirty years ago. Then I told him that I knew a man in those days by the name of Dieter, who owned one of the show places of that part of the city, which was known as Cherry Cottage, he smiled and said: "That was my father and for more than thirty years Cherry cottage was our home."
It is fair to say that every newsboy and even old timers in Philadelphia know where Cherry Cottage was, as well as they did the court house. It consisted of about fifteen acres of ground and possibly more than ten cherry trees surrounded the house, from which it derived its name, and as Mr. Dieter was a great lover of horses and a wealthy man, he had a half mile track on the place, where, early in the morning and late in the evening you could find many millionaires driving their fast horses over the track at Cherry Cottage. James E. Cooper of the famous show, hit the air of fast trotters to a road wagon and told me to take a drive and he said that "after you jog them on the streets for a time, you had better drive them to the track at Cherry Cottage, for they are well used to that track, and that is where they will do their best work." But to think that Mr. Dieter, the owner of Cherry Cottage, and I should meet in Janesville, Wisconsin, after a lapse of thirty years or more, makes you think that the world is not so large after all.
Mr. Dieter said that two years ago he visited Philadelphia for several days and one of the first of his old friends that he visited with was Adam Forepaugh, one of the famous showmen, who is living in luxury on Broad street, enjoying the millions that his famous father made in the business many years ago.

The following article clipped from the Bill Board about the famous bareback rider, Lulu Davenport, will be of more than ordinary interest to many of the old timers in Janesville, for the reason that the entire Davenport family were riders with the Burr Robbins Show for some two or three years in the late seventies. There were John Davenport, Sr., John, Jr., "Sticks," and Lulu, who even at that time, were more than ordinary performers in the business.
"Lulu Davenport, one of the bareback riders with the Ringling Brothers, is in a class by herself—for two reasons. First, she is an American producer, her father being the famous John Davenport, an acrobat, clown, rider and circus manager. Second, she is a mother, the famous May Hollie, one of the best bareback riders of her time. In other words, this graceful young equestrienne is what might be called a world by right of heritage. The Russian dancer, Pavlova, is famous for her exquisite grace and poetry of motion on the ground, but when a daring young woman, in a fascinating and exciting way, and trips lightly upon her toes upon the back of a fast moving steed, that is going the famous Russian just one better. Lulu Davenport is also an originator a producer—and all winter the greater part of her time is spent planning new acts for the following season. She coached and trained the ladies riding in the Silas Green act, with Ringlings, she herself doubling as an old rube country woman, thereby showing great versatility, as the change from a dainty young equestrienne danseuse to a hick character, making good in both, is something it requires an artist to do.

Last week George Melville, another old timer in circus business, passed away at his home in Jersey City. James Melville and Mary Melville, the father and mother of George Melville, came to this country about half a century ago from Melbourne, Australia, both of them being famous bareback riders in their day. Many years ago they were the leading features with the Cooper & Bailey Show, which was the first circus to make a trip around the world. But thirty or more years ago they retired from the business and bought an unpretentious home, on the outskirts of New York City, where James Melville and his wife both passed away, some twenty or more years ago, and it was in March, 1917, while we were showing in Madison Square Garden, New York, that my wife and I were invited out to their country home for a Sunday dinner. When we arrived at the station, James Melville, then an old man, greeted us, and turning us around and pointing toward the city said: "Do you see the top of that skyscraper, more than two miles in the distance? It looks as though they were coming this way," he said, "mother and I have seen and heard the noise of the city and the circus for so many years, that we came out here in the quiet country where most of our neighbors were truck gardeners, went to bed with the chickens and got up in the morning at the same time, and where a loud noise of any kind at night is seldom heard. If the city keeps on moving this way," he said, "mother and I will sell out and go to the wilds of Montana, but we will keep away from the noise of the city."

It was about nine years ago, which was the last time that the Barnum Show was here under James A. Bailey's management, that their youngest son, Frank Melville, was equestrian director of the show, and my wife and I entertained him at dinner, at which we spent much time rehearsing over old days. Of the entire Melville family, the youngest son, Frank, is the only one living.

The opposition brigades have been working their heads off in Northern Pennsylvania and Southern New York state the past week or so, due to the closeness with which the Barnum & Bailey circus is following the Jess Willard-Buialo Bill Wild West show in that territory. Easton, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton, Pa., and Binghamton, N. Y., are the four cities where the opposition developed the greatest. The Barnum & Bailey show only two days behind the Wild West outfit in Easton, and four days behind at Binghamton. The dates for the two shows in the respective towns, follow:
Willard-Buialo Bill show—Easton, May 9; Wilkes-Barre, May 10; Scranton, 11; Binghamton, 12.
Barnum & Bailey—Easton, May 11; Wilkes-Barre, 14; Scranton, 15; Binghamton, 18.
In the middle west several shows have been trading on each others' heels, particularly the Hagenbeck-Wallace and John Robinson Ten Big, with Barnum & Bailey following their billing closely.
Detroit at the present time is literally covered with posters for the three big circuses. The John Robinson Ten Big had the town heavily billed for May 21 and 22 and likewise the Hagenbeck-Wallace for May 29 and 30. The Barnum & Bailey show is partly billed for June 11 and 12.

SIGNS GRAASS BILL EXTENDING TERM OF TOWN SUPERVISORS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., May 25.—Governor Philipp has signed the Grass bill giving counties the option of extending the term of the town supervisor. The bill was the subject of a spirited debate in the house, and met with much opposition in the senate. It provides that the board of supervisors may, at its annual meeting in November, provide by resolution that, at the election to be held in each city or village on the first Tuesday of April following the adoption of such resolution, the supervisors shall be elected for a term of three years, and at the annual town meeting on the first Tuesday in April following the adoption of the resolution three supervisors shall be elected; one for a term of one year; one for a term of two years, and the supervisor designated as the chairman for the term of three years. The bill declares that in case such resolution is adopted, a supervisor elected to succeed the chairman shall be designated and elected at the annual town meeting in April. If a supervisor has not expired, his office as supervisor shall become vacant on the tenth day following the election, and shall be filled as provided by law.

Because the bill is optional it leaves it for the county to put the measure in force. It is intimated here that there are several counties in the northeastern section of the state anxious for a measure of this kind. Representatives from these sections urge that the term of one year, as at present, is too short to familiarize a representative of the county board with its duties and that a term of three years would make a much more suitable member. It is further suggested by those who favor legislation of this kind that a longer term of office would aid in securing better representatives.

The governor has also signed the bill for the enrollment in the civilian army of this state.
This measure provides that any person who is disqualified for or exempt from military service may enlist in such branch or division of the civilian service of this state as may best serve the interest of this state in the present war. All names are to be entered on the muster roll and shall be carried in the office of the council of defense, and after the war with the secretary of state. No person other than those enlisting and enrolling in civilian service shall be entitled to receive and wear any of the distinctive badges, buttons or other insignia provided for in the measure.

Governor Philipp has also signed the bill providing that in all cities, towns, villages and hamlets, the board of park commissioners appointed by the mayor and confirmed by the council of such city, the term of office of each commissioner shall continue for the period for which he shall have been appointed, and until his successor shall have been appointed.

appointed, confirmed and qualified. This measure is to take care of a situation which has arisen in Milwaukee, and several other cities in the state, where terms of office have expired but where the council has not yet made by the mayor.

"Home of Character"--No. 360

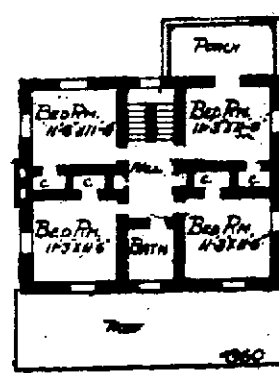

In the design of this home we have worked out a problem of a square house of modified colonial type, suited to the man who must have comfort and convenience and yet keep within a limit of $7000. The usually long colonial hallway has been arranged by means of French doors so as to become one of the artistic features of the house.

FIRST FLOOR

In the dining room the old-fashioned lines of the large window seat suggest the old colonial, while the modern china cabinets lend an air of today. Much thought has been given to the matter of cupboards and closets, and the second floor space has been so carefully arranged that four moderately large bedrooms are available.

There is a large finished attic, and the basement is under the entire house. A rough-faced dark brick is used for the exterior with

The Greater Patriotism

Russia Throws Off the Yoke.
(By Paul Holmes.)

RUSSIA THROWS OFF THE YOKE.

By Paul Holmes.
Chapter Ten.
Francis L. Verne was held as a prisoner of war by the Russians who had captured him. At first he had been thought a spy, and had been confined in the guardhouse awaiting trial. But a day came when he had been led away from his prison and put to work with a company of captured Russian soldiers. The work was tedious and the conditions were under a terrible strain. He had no means of knowing how long his confinement would last, and as the days went on he grew more and more worried. There was no one to tell him how things were going on in the world, and he was in his fear he imagined the worst. The Duma was trying to deliver to General Brusiloff a letter that was already destroyed. And here he was—confined in a Russian detention camp as a prisoner of war. He had been given no chance to prove his identity or state his case, but was merely arrested on suspicion and put to work.

The gross injustice of it all filled him, and also, as he thought it over, the reason to realize that without his passport the seeing of General Brusiloff would be an impossibility. There was no way in which he, a nameless captive, could reach the Russian leader. And if he did see this man and win him over to the cause of the revolution he would have failed in his mission. The confidence which Prince Usipoff had placed in him would have been misplaced.

And while he struggled with the mighty problem which confronted him he did not notice the noise of the great guns which were firing around him. He had been quartered with five captured Germans and they shared the same tent at night. When the first month of his confinement had passed he became aware that these men were planning escape. They took him into their confidence and he learned that on a certain night they had received information that the Germans would attack the Russian sector. They planned to take advantage of the surprise and overpower the guards. Immediately breaking for the German lines, they would take the prisoners and make their way to the rear. The plan was a good one, but the prisoners had no other idea than that he was also a German soldier. That point, however, was the one which caused him a great deal of anxiety. He could not seek help from the Germans because they were his enemies even more than Russia. And as the day for the attack approached he could think of no plan to evade both armies.

Chance and chance alone might lead him to General Brusiloff at such a time. If the fate were kind the German attack might prove his salvation. But such a freak of luck was improbable. And after that there would be no possible chance of his seeing the general.

Slowly a great determination was coming to L. Verne. A wildly improbable adventure, a misleading message to the Duma, and a final appeal to the one whom the world styled the ruler of the Russians were some of the thoughts in a new plan which was slowly forming in his brain. It was so daring, so sudden and so seemingly impossible that for a time Francis hardly dared to think of putting it into execution, and yet—it was the last chance. If he failed, the whole of Russia, torn by a revolution whose leaders were misinformed as to the state of affairs, would be overrun by conquering Germans who had long waited the opportunity to quell a Russian uprising and placing Nicholas on the throne again. The risk was terrible, scarcely to be overbalanced by the chances of success. Did he have the right to take it? Francis did not know, and he puzzled over the question a time flew on with inexorable swiftness.

The second of March came at last. It was the day appointed for the German surprise attack. L. Verne was in a state of suppressed excitement. He and his fellow captives toiled in the trenches, trying to dig fortifications in the frozen ground. Everything went on as usual.

At five o'clock that evening the attack came. A shell whistled over them as a warning to dig. The Russian army was unprepared for the assault and evidently completely off their guard. For twenty minutes the bombardment continued. Evidently the Germans were advancing infantry.

An hour later the Russian army was in disgraceful, undisciplined flight. Horsemen and foot soldiers fled past the place where L. Verne and his comrades were still being kept at work. In a short time the guards had caught the infection of terror and deserted their post. Francis saw that it would only be a question of time before the Germans would occupy the trenches, and he decided to act immediately.

He started running with the rest of the fugitives, but when a Russian came feet in front of him, he saw his chance. He quickly dragged the man's body to the trench and changed his prisoner's clothes for the uniform of the dead soldier.

Bullets were flying all about now, and he made haste to catch up with the retreating army. The flight was becoming slower and Francis could tell that somewhere ahead a German mine had been made. He had no desire to stay with the army, as his confinement there would be as virtual as if he were a prisoner, so he watched for an opportunity and slipped off into the gathering darkness.

Unobserved, he made his way for miles over the snow. Morning found him close to Riga, worn out and exhausted, still undecided as to what course to pursue.

Chapter Eleven.
The Month of March grew steadily and for those in authority at Petrograd every moment was a tense one. The Emperor had prorogued the Duma, but the Duma held a meeting in spite of the imperial order. Nicholas was in a frenzy. He was a weak-willed man, but when he made a decision he was accustomed to being obeyed.

The house of Romanoff was the most powerful family in the world, and Nicholas had been brought up to believe the fact. Now he had ordered the dissolution of the Duma and that body had defied him. He called his ministers to council, and what advice Protogopoff gave him will never be known. At any rate, he decided to make use of the royal troops to insure obedience.

Drawn in the city another bread riot broke out. It was of larger proportions than any previous one and crowds after crowds joined in the rioting. By noon thousands of soldiers were patrolling the streets, shouting frantically and destroying everything in their path.

It was an auspicious time to open the revolution and Rodzianke, real-izing that he was in a desperate position, decided to give the Duma a surprise attack. He would be like inviting defeat before the battle. Usipoff was in agony of suspense. He knew Francis L. Verne better than any of the other conspirators, and had more confidence in him, but even he was beginning to doubt. The situation was intolerable.

The Duma was in session when the royal army arrived in the morning. The Duma was in session when the royal army arrived in the morning. The Duma was in session when the royal army arrived in the morning.

Temperance Talks

(By Temperance Educational League.)

Brewery Domination in Wisconsin.

When Governor Phillips vetoed the Byrle referendum bill the voters of Wisconsin were denied the right to exercise their political franchise upon a question which effected the whole commonwealth. This was a blow which had been before the legislature for almost four months, that had been discussed in every part of Wisconsin by all classes of people, and which the majority of our citizens desired to have submitted to them for a direct vote. There might have been honest differences of opinion concerning some of its provisions, but the veto was not an act of unbearable intolerance, but it was an insult to every intelligent citizen of the state.

For years the brewers of Wisconsin have selected legislative candidates who were favorable to their interests. They have kept a lobby at the state capital and they have named men to represent our state in congress. Now they are so arrogant that they are unwilling to allow the people the right to vote.

We believe the time has come when the voters of Wisconsin should show that sort of thing; that they should redeem this state and its government from brewery domination, and that no man should be elected to any office five legislative office who places the brewery interests above the welfare of our state and our people.

COSTS ARE INCREASING all along the line and there's no relief in sight. So it may be necessary any day to add $75 or $100 to the present price of all Reo models. Others have—Reo may have to.

AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEPT

ALLEN B. WEST, Director

(By Allen B. West.)
Question—Dr. Mr. West: In Monday's Gazette, May 23, you advise spraying fruit trees now. Mine are in blossom and I have heard it said that a spray when they are in bloom is likely to kill the bees, which are necessary for the fertilization of the fruit. Is this true? J. M. D.
Answer—When the letter which appeared in Monday's Gazette was written, the buds on the fruit trees were just beginning to show. Unfortunately, however, there was a delay in printing the article so that the trees were in full bloom when the article appeared and the advice did not apply to the conditions. It is not wise to spray fruit trees when in bloom on account of the bees. They should be sprayed when the buds show pink on the apple trees and white on cherries and plums. They should be sprayed again when the blossoms fall and a third time ten days later, or before the calyx cups close. These sprayings are for prevention of damage by scab and by codling moth and chowling insects such as plum or apple gouger. For scab either lime sulphur or Bordeaux is applied, the lime sulphur being just now the preference for the spray at this time. The Bordeaux may cause the russeting of the fruit. For the codling moth or chowling insects, powdered arsenate of lead, combined with the Bordeaux or lime sulphur, is used. If Bordeaux is used the proportion of 5 lbs. of copper sulphate and 5 lbs. of lime to 50 gallons of water is right. If lime sulphur, use 1 gallon to 40 gallons of water. Combine arsenate of lead with the Bordeaux at the rate of 1 or 1 1/2 lbs. to 50 gallons, or with the lime sulphur at the same rate. Directions for making Bordeaux have been given in these columns many times, but if desired again will be repeated upon request. Remember the directions in last Monday's Gazette, when combining Bordeaux and arsenate of lead to add the arsenate to the lime water instead of pouring it into combined copper sulphate and lime.

Treating Seed Potatoes for Scab.
Question—When should the late potato seed be treated for scab?
Answer—It should be done at once. Bulletin 280 on Potato Growing in Wisconsin, issued April, 1917, says: "Seed potatoes should be treated from three to four weeks before the planting date as the treatment can be made during the greatest safety. Spraying has not started. It is also advisable to keep the seed stock after treatment under moderate light and temperature conditions in order that sprouting may start before the tubers are cut."

The proportions given are three gallons of water to one gallon of Bordeaux. The seed potatoes may be put into gunny sacks and immersed in the solution, where they should remain two hours. They should then be washed and dried. The seed should then be spread out and allowed to stand in moderate light and temperature until a short time before they are to be planted, when it should be cut. If the potatoes have sprouted before they are cut it will be easy to see what ones are dead or weak. They should never be planted.
Kill or Shut Up the Roosters.
Question—How many roosters do I need with a flock of thirty pure bred hens?
Answer—After this time of year you do not need any. In fact, all poultrymen are strongly urged to dispose of their roosters so that they may have fertile eggs for storage. Fertile ones are easily spoiled and are the ones from which the trouble comes when there are bad eggs. If you have a few chickens, it is better to have a few fertile eggs than to have a few bad ones. If you have a few fertile eggs you would better buy eggs for the next hatch than to invest in roosters.
Don't be in a hurry about getting the tomato plants out. Those who had them out before the 22nd will find they were still in pots. They were frozen on Tuesday, the 22nd. Set the late plants deep, covering a large portion of the stem. At each joint roots will form, giving a good stocky plant with abundant roots. You can harden your plants before setting by putting them out of doors and by letting the earth get quite dry, even so that the plants are quite dry when you transplant to the open ground you may take the ball of earth out without disturbing the roots of the plant and the transplanting will be less of a shock to the plant.

BOTH HOUSES SEEK TO CLEAR UP WORK; HOLD FEW HEARINGS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Madison, Wis., May 26.—These are clearing up days in the legislature. All bills are to be referred to the calendar in the senate after next Tuesday. That practice prevails in the house at the present time. The legislature has discontinued the issuance of hearing bills. Many of the assembly committee rooms have been abandoned, as committee hearings have been discontinued. The state council of defense has been given possession of three of the most important committee rooms. Some of the more important measures that necessitate a hearing will be given consideration by either house as a committee of the whole.
While Governor Philipp has not yet been able to secure the introduction of his bill prohibiting the sale of whisky in the state, he has introduced a bill that will be introduced in the senate. Representatives of the liquor interests will demand a hearing and it is possible that the senate will sit as a committee to consider the bill if it is introduced.

Next week's session of the senate promises to be rather inactive. Many of the most important pieces of legislation have been laid over for a week or ten days. The Wilson bill, relating to grade crossings so as to eliminate the cost at present places, was the first of the bills to be laid over until June 6. The Whittey bill, relating to the reorganization of the state board of education, had been laid over until the same day.
The assembly shows its desire to keep the legislature in session until the work is concluded, by putting through the Carl Hansen resolution for a sine die adjournment of the legislature on June 9. As many bills in the senate have been laid over until a later date, there is no possibility of an adjournment of the legislature at this time. Previous indications are that it will be nearer July 1. At first a movement was started to have the legislature adjourn one week because Memorial Day comes on next Wednesday. Receiving little sentiment for such a proposition, the senate has decided to lay over the most important bills, and there will be no adjournment until the upper house of the coming week. The assembly will proceed with its business, however. A reconsideration has been entered on the normal school appropriation bill and on the industrial commission appropriation measure. Both of these bills will be thoroughly gone into next week.

From present indications the legislature is going to pass a bill providing for the reapportionment of the railway taxes. When the measure came up in the house, Assemblyman Donnell objected to the bill, claiming it would make a big difference in the city of Milwaukee.

The present law provides that the state shall get 15 per cent of the tax and the 85 per cent shall go to the locality through which the line operates.

The new bill which has just passed the assembly, provides that 20 per cent of the tax shall be retained by the state, 20 per cent by the county and 60 per cent by the locality.

Donnell objected to the bill on the ground that it produces the largest part of the revenue, because of the through hauls, and was entitled to 85 per cent of the tax collected. The tax commission, however, has been determined to fight to have the bill as passed by the assembly. The senate to defeat the measure, as some of the Milwaukee representatives have already indicated that they are opposed to the bill.

THE GAZETTE'S MOTORIST PROBLEM DEPARTMENT

(PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY)

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—What the trouble is, whether in gas or spark and what to do with it. A READER.
Clean spark plugs, prime cylinders, and see if engine starts. If it refuses to start with gasoline in the cylinders, it shows ignition trouble. If it runs and stops, even with trouble wide open, it shows carburetor trouble. Disconnect a spark plug and hold one-half inch from cylinder. Crank engine and see if spark occurs on battery, but not on magneto. Trouble is in armature winding. If carburetor trouble is shown, trace gasoline from point to point until trouble is found.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—Please answer in your valuable paper my question. I have a 1915 Ford with a Gray & Davis magneto for starting and lighting. Now the battery is weak and in poor shape and does not start the motor when cold. In such weather as we have lately, the battery was in storage last winter and the garage man said that while it was in bad condition, with careful usage and nursing it would do the work this season. If there is a reasonable amount of service left in it, do not like to discard it, and I have a plan I wish to submit to you, feeling that as you have no concern in the matter, and being qualified to pass on the subject, you will tell me straight whether or not the scheme is worth considering. I do not wish to invest in a bunch of stuff that is very likely to be junk, so I am asking you to say if the plan is worth trying. To do this, I will connect the battery and connect it in to supplement and assist the Willard to do the work. The same to be cut in when a system of switches is set up. The batteries may be used together or separately, and to be so arranged that the batteries may be charged separately or together from the generator. I do not wish you to go into detail but just tell me if it is practical and will work. If it is just a brainstorm, many thanks for the favor.

Motorist Department, The Gazette.—Your scheme to connect batteries in parallel is an excellent one, the only danger being that the smaller one will have too much current and burn out. If you connect the generator on my car is getting the electrolyte frequently until you find out how the idea works out. Keep it up to $275 or 1,000, better have battery charged at a service station.

If there is a reasonable amount of service left in it, do not like to discard it, and I have a plan I wish to submit to you, feeling that as you have no concern in the matter, and being qualified to pass on the subject, you will tell me straight whether or not the scheme is worth considering. I do not wish to invest in a bunch of stuff that is very likely to be junk, so I am asking you to say if the plan is worth trying. To do this, I will connect the battery and connect it in to supplement and assist the Willard to do the work. The same to be cut in when a system of switches is set up. The batteries may be used together or separately, and to be so arranged that the batteries may be charged separately or together from the generator. I do not wish you to go into detail but just tell me if it is practical and will work. If it is just a brainstorm, many thanks for the favor.

BOLSTER BOTH TEAMS
FOR GAME TOMORROW

Cards and Visitors Will Tryout New Men in Battle at Fairgrounds Sunday Afternoon.

"Shorty" Lee and the Neun Hats are coming to Janesville tomorrow loaded to the crown with new players in the hopes of taking the Cards into camp and break the losing streak of the Green City leaguers. At almost complete new lineup will be decked out in Milwaukee suits tomorrow, half a dozen members of the previous team having been drafted back to the sandlots.

The Cardinals have an offensive rapped out to meet that of the visitors and several changes will also be noticeable when the local team takes the field.

Today Manager Willis Cole was seriously thinking of shifting Lacey from first and covering the sack himself. Some change is absolutely necessary here. It has been in all three games played thus far.

It is also certain that a new catcher will be on hand. President Langdon today was communicating with three different backstops, one from Rockford, one from Waukegan, and the third from Burlington. Some changes are contemplated in both the in and the outfield, in fact, they have been since Sunday, but whether or not they will really be made was indefinite as late as noon today. Both Langdon and Cole believe that the team can be materially strengthened. They are doing it gradually and giving every man a full tryout to determine his full worth.

JANESVILLE ALL-STARS IN DOUBLE HEADER WITH THE M. B. C.'S SUNDAY

The Janesville All-Stars will play a double header with the M. B. C.'s Sunday at the Institute grounds.

The first game will start at 1:15, and the second right after the first game. The battery for the M. B. C.'s is unknown. The battery for the Stars will be Wall and Crowley, catching, and Hagar and Beck, pitching. Last Sunday's game was interrupted in the second inning by the appearance of the patrol wagon. The cops said there would be no more Sunday ball in the Fourth Ward park. As a result is being made to get the park back, so that everybody can play Sunday ball in the park. This will be the Stars' sixth game of the season. The Institute diamond is on the left side of the institute.

MORRIS MILLER

With the present limit of thirty-five players up to play, and twenty-two in the National from then on till the fall recruiting season begins, major league managers have such a plethora of talent they have been able to develop the pinch hitting form of strategy to the limit. The pitcher who allows more than three or four hits in these days is almost sure to be taken out, especially if his team is behind in the run-making in the early innings.

As soon as it comes the pitcher's turn to bat he is replaced by a bench warmer who occasionally gets on, but usually gets out. Then another pitcher works two or three innings, and if his team still is behind, he gives way to another bench warmer, and so on.

This system is partly responsible for the paucity of hitting that is articulated baseball recently and this year in particular. It also is responsible for removing a lot of interest from the sport. When a team makes a couple of runs in the first inning the fans are so excited that the game is settled, because if the losing team starts batting enough to overcome that lead the pitcher usually is replaced by a bench warmer. The only way a team can overcome a lead of five runs nowadays is to be helped by a flock of errors or the hand of Providence.

Much more uncertainty would be insured if the result of the game were made to depend more on the ability of the players than on the strategy of the managers, and his resources were curtailed.

There is another angle to the case. Baseball thrives largely on publicity. In the present situation, with white paper so scarce and the cost of postage and everything else connected with the production of a newspaper going up, it is a fight for space every day in the week and on Sundays, too. It is only a question of time, if the managers are not curbed, before it will be impossible to find space for the box scores of all the games played in the major leagues.

When a manager like Fielder Jones of the St. Louis Browns uses from fifteen to twenty men in a game habitually, instead of the nine or ten men who could complete it just as successfully nine times out of ten, it doubles the space occupied by the score of the Browns' game. If half the managers in each major league go crazy, too, it may double the space required for printing the full scores of the games. And good news knows the fans eat up those box scores.

If the strategically crazy managers are permitted to compete the reports of ball games down to scores by innings only it is going to make a bigger cut in the attendance than the tax will, because it will deprive the enthusiast of some of the fuel by which he keeps up the fires of his enthusiasm.

The powers that be in baseball, therefore, can trim their sails to the coming storms by reducing the number of players on a team and at the same time increase the chances that their patrons will be fed continuously with complete box scores.

Manager Callahan of the Pirates is trying to secure First Baseman Hatch on Schmidt, who still belongs to the Braves but has been in retirement since 1915.

Last year at this time the Clevelanders were leading the American league race and Owner Dunn was coining money.

Poor pitching by Rudolph and Tyler has put the Braves down in the second division. Stallings has been learning his hair.

Fielder Jones is making no more predictions. The Browns are helpless without Pratt and Weiland and the Cardinals have the call just now.

Carey of the Pirates who held up Barney Drayfuss for more than $5,000 in salary last winter is batting .284.

STATE WILL REGISTER
220,000 ELIGIBLES

Milwaukee, Wis., May 26.—Wisconsin will register more than 220,000 men under the selective service army bill.

It will take from ten days to two weeks to complete the registration, according to poll experts here today. The entire proceeding will be carried on as a state or national election with the possible exception of officials in charge. County officials are the high authorities in communities except those of more than 30,000 population. In such cities the mayor becomes the executive authority.

Every person registering must fill out in detail his name, date of birth, the character of his citizenship, occupation, employer, whether he has dependents, is married, has seen military service, and whether he claims exemption from draft. On the other side of the registration card, registrars will fill out in detail a physical description. Having completed registration the individual will receive a receipt in the form of a registration certificate.

WAR MYSTERY SOLVED;

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, May 26.—"Rush secret bread urgent heinemann."

Hist. Deep stuff. Maybe Germans planning to dump England's bread supply into the bottomless sea.

Postal inspector summons postal censor and hands him the telegram.

Censor summons a detective inspector from Scotland Yard.

Detective inspector lights pipe, ties mustache behind his ears, disguising appearance, and sets out to thwart plan. With the aid of magnifying glass, smoked glasses, gum-shoes and false face detective ascertains from telegraph office that telegram was sent by C. S. Evans, a publisher.

Detective visits Evans, first aiming all chambers of pocket howitzer for possible gun play.

Dialogue: "Did you send telegram signed 'heinemann' urging someone to rush secret bread?"

C. S. Evans: "Yes; that is, I mean to say, certainly."

Detective: "Explain, please."

Evans: "Certainly. 'Secret Bread' is a new novel. I telegraphed the printers to rush the new edition to William Heinemann and company, the publishers."

Detective: "Oh!"

DESTRUCTION WORK
SYSTEMATIZED THE ALLIES CAN PROVE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

With the French Armies, May 23—Copies of official orders, as well as other documents, relative to the systematic destruction of the towns, farms and orchards of the French territory occupied by the Germans are now being found in large numbers on the German prisoners taken along the Aisne and in Champagne.

All the genius for minuteness of detail, organization and thoroughness which has ever been the boast of the German people, appears to have been drawn upon to the fullest extent in the preparation and execution of this destruction.

Following are the extracts from these orders:

"The last grand destructions in Graveliers, Beffvillers, Aubin and Avesnes will begin at 3 o'clock. To cover the incendiary crews the commanders of each sector will furnish two under officers and twenty men of the battalions B and (two stretcher bearers with stretchers, e. sector D for Beffvillers and Graveliers and sector F for Avesnes. These latter villages will not be burned."

"The destruction of Parguilly, Beugnate and Fremicourt will begin the second day of the march at 3 o'clock, but however not before 5 o'clock. The destruction of localities and wells that may be useful to the rear guard detachment of Scheinmiz must not take place till the third day of the march towards 2 o'clock after an understanding with the detachment unless the adversary's operations render necessary an earlier destruction. The fires may be started equally the third day of the march towards 2 o'clock. The medical service for the destruction crews at Beugnate, Fremicourt and Favreuil will be assured by Scheinmiz's detachment."

Somewhat similar orders, perfected in every detail, are then given for the destruction of Louverai, Denicourt and Boursies. Special instructions for the destruction of wells read as follows:

"The destruction of all wells is important. The wells of the villages east of the position B 3 must not be destroyed until they have become useless to the troops making the movement. Especially, it will be necessary to keep count of the number of wells necessary for the second day of the march, at Morchies for the 17th D. I., and likewise at Louverai and Boursies for the 17th D. I., and at Denicourt for the First D. R. G."

A letter found on a prisoner who regiment destroyed the village of Truseauit gives the writer's horror of what he had been obliged to do in these terms:

"The place where there was formerly a flourishing village (Truseauit) with a peaceful population one only sees now a heap of ruins, the work of the fury of destruction of the 230th regiment. The Russians themselves have not accomplished worse ravages and it is doubtful if we can be considered soldiers. When we go to the front it seems that we become the worst criminals. That is how we accomplish our work of destruction on the Somme. You can imagine how we live now, not like men but like savage animals."

Make a list of requirements such as beauty, comfort, convenience, horsepower and the like.

Overland has won the verdict of over 400,000 owners after a comparison of such items.

If this is not enough to convince you, then judge your Overland by what you cannot see.

You cannot see the accuracy, the minute care, nor the patient perfecting that are practiced in Willys-Overland manufacturing methods.

But you may know that these things are definite Willys-Overland accomplishments—else it would never have been possible for us to market those 400,000 cars.

You cannot see the quality in the materials—the scientific reasons for designs, nor the proven superiority of every part and principle.

These things, and the millions in economies effected by Willys-Overland's vast production, are vital factors in your car although not visible to the layman's eye.

But they are visible to the layman's reason—they are seen in continued consistent performance—and they are shown convincingly in the price that gives you a better car for less money.

The Big Four—the car that made Overland—exemplifies this excess value. The experience accumulated in the building of over 300,000 similar four-cylinder Overlands has contributed directly to the development and perfecting of this model.

Test its superior mechanical excellence and remarkable easy riding qualities—come in and judge for yourself its incomparable beauty of design.

The Liberty Loan of 1917

Farmers, Business Men, Professional Men, Clerks, Stenographers, Every American Everywhere Should Help With This First Blow to Imperialism.

As Good as Cash and Paying Interest

In asking you to subscribe to the "LIBERTY LOAN" your government does not ask you to spend your money. Instead it holds out to you an opportunity to SAVE and INVEST.

It merely asks for the use of your ready cash. It offers to pay well for the privilege and to give you in return the safest investment in the world--A UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT BOND.

When you invest in a "LIBERTY BOND" you get a signed "promise to pay" backed by the total resources of the richest nation on the face of the globe—a nation whose wealth is recorded at the astounding figure of $250,000,000,000 or nearly the combined wealth of Great Britain, France, Germany and Austria-Hungary. You get the bond of a nation whose yearly income is estimated at $50,000,000,000, or twenty-five times the present loan—one whose per capita wealth of $2500 is larger than that of any other power and whose per capita debt, even after the present $2,000,000,000 loan is sold, will be about $30, less than one-tenth that of either Great Britain, France or Germany.

Greater Prosperity for You

Most of the proceeds of this first offering will be loaned by our Government to our Allies—but not a dollar will leave this country or pay for other than American products. This money will be used to extend credit to the Allies that they may continue to enter our markets and pay us for the products of our FARMS and of our FACTORIES. It will come back to us finally in payment for labor and materials. It will broaden the market for our goods, increase the demand for what we have to sell, speed up production and yet guard against over-production.

Later on it will make our Government the world's biggest customer for our own products because practically the entire $2,000,000,000 will come back for re-deposit in our banks to be used in payment for what our FARMS AND FACTORIES products. In short this great loan will quicken our industrial pulse and make for BIGGER, BETTER BUSINESS throughout the entire country and in YOUR OWN INDIVIDUAL BUSINESS.

As Good As Cash

In some ways "LIBERTY BONDS" are even better than cash--they are in much the same class as United States Bank Notes--are almost as liquid as a checking account at your bank--and they pay you three and one-half per cent interest. Your banker will take your bonds as security for a loan.

No investment you hold can be safer and no other bonds enjoy such a broad and ready market in case you wish to sell. You can get your money practically as easily as you can withdraw it from a savings bank and the right to convert it into high rate bonds gives you absolute protection of income.

Subscribe Now--It's Your Duty

Subscribe for your "LIBERTY BOND" now. It is as patriotic an act as you can do. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo says: "The greatest immediate service the American people can render in this War for universal liberty throughout the world is to furnish the means for its vigorous prosecution. This bond issue is the first step. I earnestly bespeak the co-operation of every citizen throughout the length and breadth of the land in this great service of patriotism."

Do not purchase from solicitors or agents. Any bank, trust company or post office will take your subscription for your "LIBERTY BOND" make the best financial and patriotic investment of your life AT ONCE.

Liberty Loan

The Following are the Details of the Loan as Officially Announced by the Treasury Department:

Amount of Bonds Offered for Subscription $2,000,000,000.

The bonds will be dated June 15, 1917, and will bear interest at the rate of 3½% per annum from that date, payable semi-annually on December 15th and June 15th. Principal and interest will be payable in United States gold coin. The bonds will be exempt both as to principal and interest from all taxation, except estate or inheritance taxes, imposed by the authority of the United States or its possessions, or by any state or local taxing authorities. The bonds will not bear the circulation privilege, but will be received as security for deposits of public money.

If any series of bonds shall be issued by the United States at a higher rate of interest than 3½% before the termination of the war between the United States of America and the Imperial German Government, the holders of any of the bonds of the present issue shall have the privilege of converting the same, within such period, into an equal par amount of bonds bearing such higher rate of interest.
